Production and processing

Sabah batik is a textile art whereby the artist uses a wax-resist dyeing technique. The wax is used as a barrier to ensure that the different colours used will not be absorbed when the fabric is soaked or when the colour is put on the fabric. The motifs used on the batik are based on designs from different ethnic groups.

Link between product and territory

Sabah is Malaysia's easternmost state and one of the two Malaysian states on the island of Borneo. Sabah comprises many ethnic groups. For this reason, Sabah batik designs consist of different motifs that represent this ethnic diversity.
